

Parenting And Living With Hemophilia Education Event From TwelveStone Health Partners Set For November 4th

Post-Acute Care Provider Launches Chronic Disease Educational Series

Post-acute care pharmacy services provider TwelveStone Health Partners will host an education event for families living with a hemophilia diagnosis on November 4th at its West Northfield Boulevard headquarters location, beginning at noon.

“We spend a lot of time helping people managing a wide range of illnesses and conditions that require chronic care management,” says Shane Reeves, chief executive officer of TwelveStone. “Our goal is to educate, inform and inspire those who might be living with a hemophilia diagnosis.”

In addition to Reeves, Chronic Care Management nurse Kathy Marcella, and her son Zach, a hemophiliac and Chronic Care Advocate at TwelveStone, are scheduled speakers.

“Hemophilia occurs in about one in every 5,000 live male births, and there’s an estimated 20,000 individuals living with hemophilia in the United States today,” says Kathy Marcella. “It’s manageable, but it requires constant care and vigilance. We want to share our story in hopes that we can help — and inform — others, especially those who may have been recently diagnosed with hemophilia and their families.”

In addition to critical medications required by patients dealing with hemophilia, TwelveStone provides a concierge service including 24/7 access to advocate and pharmacists support, home delivery of medications, medication management and help with insurance and refill coordination.
