

by: HME News Staff
Friday, January 5, 2018

TwelveStone, VirtueRN tackle fragmented post-acute care market

CHAPIN, S.C. – TwelveStone Health Partners and VirtueRN have joined forces to develop a post-acute care technology platform to address the fragmented market for medical equipment and medication services. The platform is expected to streamline workflow processes and increase the level of communication across the continuum of care. “Technology offers the opportunity to ensure that patients get what they need faster and more efficiently,” says Shane Reeves, CEO of TwelveStone Health Partners. “Our understanding of the players and shortcomings regarding post-acute medication service delivery, combined with VirtueRN’s technology prowess and knowledge of the post-acute care market, makes the combination a natural partnership opportunity.” TwelveStone says VirtueRN has a head start in creating the platform, allowing the two companies to get to market more rapidly and reduce overall project investment.